Shops Operate 62 Days With No Accidents

Sixty two days without an accident of sufficient magnitude to injure seriously one of the many hundreds of employes is the record of the local Louisville and Nashville shops as stated by Charles W. Matthews, master mechanic and chairman of the shops "Safety First" committee.

The accomplishment of the hundreds of working men, many of them in close contact with steam driven machinery, is considered a notable one, and one that ranks high with the best records in the United States for "Safety First."

The sixty two day record was gained during the two months of July and August, each month having 31 days.

It is expected that proper recognition of the fine service the local shopmen are making to prevent loss of time, limb and life during the time they are employed by the railroad here, will be shown at some future time.

In April of this year, the shops went "100 per cent non-accident," and in memory of that feat, a big celebration was held at the local R. R. Y. M. C. A. which was attended by many high officials of the L. & N. R. R.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 9-A terrific rainstorm which continued several hours and flooded Shanghai's streets to a depth of two Yest late this afternoon halted fighting between the equipped, and that our country should Chekiang and Kiangsu armies, west and northwest of the city.

> SHANGHAI, Sept. 9-The Chekiang forces, defending Shanghai against the Kiangsu troops have regained all the ground they had lost in the Liuho sector, northwest of this city, it was announced here late to-

Heavy rain stopped the fighting this evening in accordance with the Chinese military tradition that fighting can be done only in good weather.

Announcement of the successful counter attack near Liuho was made at the Lunkwha headquarters of the Chekiang forces, after two major battles had engaged the troops for several hours.

Both battles, representing counter attacks by the Chekiang troops

Upon their return from Montgomery, Tuesday, T. A. Bowles and Clyde Hendrix confirmed press dispatches to the effect that before Christmas the state highway commission will begin surveys in Morgan County for read work to be done on prominent highways in the county, and early in 1925 the highway commission will grant to the county about $140,124 from the proceeds of the sale

Mr. Hendrix explained that while work under the present plan as agreed to by the highway commission would not cause work to begin quite as early as was exp previously suggested but that by hav-against the invading Klangsu forces were started at noon. One in the Shanghai-Nanking railway sector was started between Nansiang and Hwangtu, with Anting, 20 miles from Shanghai, as the objective.

The other was at Liuho on the coast northwest of Woosing. An observer who returned from that front at four o"clock this afternoon, reported that he had seen the Chekiang troops push forward their fighting line for a gain of two miles.

The rain which stopped the fighting started very shortly afterwards at about 4:15 p. m.

Warned by fing west of her at Nansiang, 12 miles from the city, foreign governments landed 1,100 troops from 22 warships stationed in the harbor at daybreak today, and were ready to defend the settlement should come within the . ne of fire.

President Coolidge and his cabinet, with Mrs. Coolidge and the cabinet ladies were at Bolling Field early to greet the air heroes on their arrival. As word came that they were delayed, the President decidd to stick it out, abandoning lunchon engagements. He had already waited for hours at the field despite rain and mists. Offiers at the field had expected the fliers to lunch with them, but prompty invited the President and Mrs. Coolidge when the chief executive determined to stay on at the field. Their invitation was promptly accepted and while the fliers were uncheoning at Aberdeen, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge went to the officers mess at the field, as guests of the air service personnel. Cabinet members and their wives also became the officers luncheon guests and other high officials of the government department and of the army and navy who had turned out to pay their tributes to the world fliers.

While preparations for the meal went forward, word came from Aberdeen that the fog already was lifting and the fliers were preparing to be

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9-Albert B. Fall's objection to the presence of a Association Secretaries on the Louis- stenographer in the room of the grand jury investigation of naval oil leases was sustained today by Justice Siddons, of the district of Columbia supreme court, but his attorneys' pleas to stop the proceedings were denied.

The court held that the presence of the stenographer, not a special assistant to the attorney general and a lawyer, was in violation of the secrecy of grand jury proceedings and that testimony of three witnesses so far examined will have to be retaken. Claims by Fall's attorneys that the proceedings were not for the purpose of obtaining additional indictments in the oil leases, but were sierely "a fishing expedition' for more evidence were not agreed to by the court. Government counsel said the present proceedings would be discontinued and others started to conform

Has the weather man simply become a press agent for the popular song, "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More?"

Hundreds of homes in the Twin Cities are preparing over three thousand children to enter school on Monday. The books are ready for the children the teachers have been selcted and the school houses are in readiness. In a at over the country the school population will be at its tasks. It is estimated that about one sixth of the population is engaged directly in educational pur-

And the other five-sixths should be busy seeking extended education. It is a wise parent that knows his own children, which is another way of saying that wise parents keep step with their children in intellectual pursuits.

Those out of school and beyond school age, cannot enter the school buildings—they are at the active duties of life. But all can and should continue their education. There is no such thing as one completing his or her education. There are no graduations, for keeps.

We will keep up the grind of getting learning, just as the grind for getting bread must be kept up, provided there is a real desire for self-development.

There were never so many agencies as now for the diffusion of knowledge. First and foremost there is the news of the day. An authority has recently said in speaking of the place of news in education that newspapers and periodicals furnish the great means for diffusion of knowledge because of their "well nigh universal contacts."

The news is the raw material so to speak from which public opinion is manufactured. It is important that the "news" be read aright. Seldom is a statement set down in a newspaper as absolute fact, but casual readers seem to have a habit of taking as facts, very many statements, madeonly in a conditional way. If the news is to be read to the best advantage, the reader should note all the qualifying words, and understand also, the relation of the facts as stated to the world at large. A proper reading of newspapers establishes confidence in the good intentions of most people, rather than creating distrust, as so often the Universal education will be an impossibility unless the people read the newspapers and also seek to read them aright. Other means of self education are the libraries, lectures, and the radio, to say nothing of what may be learned at the churches and Sunday Schools of the land.

ress, there is another great movement on foot Bobby Burns has summed it up: for eliminating all aggressive warfare. President Coolidge is enlisted for the war against war judging from the following excerpt from his recent speech of acceptance:

When the reparations plan is in operation I shall deem it an appropriate time to approach the great Powers with a proposal for another conference for a further limitation of armaments and for devising plans for a codification of international law. I personally should favor entering into covenants for the purpose of outlawing aggressive war by any practical means. Those who are working out detailed plans to present such a policy for consideration have my entire sympathy.

Very significant is the approval given plans for

Donald, of England and that nation's foreign minister spoke recently to the League of Nations gathered at Geneva on the absolute necessity of an end being put to wars, his sentiments met with deafening applause. McDonald did not speak for England alone. He did not speak for Europe alone. He spoke for the entire world. America can come more nearly doing as she pleases as usual, and can come nearest turning a deaf ear to the peace propagandists, for re-publication of all news dispatches credited to it or but even this country must take notice through its rulers of the world demand for peace.

Wilson's words to the effect that the people will destroy any government that allows such another war as the World war, have never been doubted or challenged. Rulers are expected to keep the world peace just as local officials are expected to keep the community peace.

The New York Times speaks approvingly of Me-Donald's speech as follows:

In pledging the British government to do everything within its power to heighten the prestige and widen the influence of the League of Nations, Mr. MacDonald made himself the protagonist of a belief which is fixing itself in the mind of the world with ever greater tenacity. Individual rulers have not the power which they used to enjoy and separate governments do not command the confidence which they once did, but in the union of nations for common and beneficient purposes there is a strength such as was never at the service of mankind before and which it cannot spare. The historian Ferrero has recently confessed that he has been converted to the faith of the League of Nations largely because he sees nowhere else a sure guarantee of stable and honorable relations between the countries of the earth. No single nation, and no two or three nations, can sign a treaty that the world would regard as certain to endure.

Young Mr. Edward Windsor, of London, and several other places desired to visit some friends in America, and then proceed to his ranch in Canada for an outing. That he happens to be the eldest son of the King of England, and therefore, Prince of Wales, and heir to the British throne is something for which he is not responsible. He expressed the desire that he be regarded solely as British gentleman in this country on a visit, and having voluntarily put behind him his political status, good taste and good breeding would impel others to acquisce and treat him as he desires to be treated—as a private person.

Yet, on shipboard he was pursued by snobs and social climbers who sought to force themselves upon him. He was compelled to keep closely to his quarters to avoid the vulgar curiosity of these pushing bounders who sought to bask in reflected glory by being seen in his company-albeit the occasion was most unwelcome to Mr. Windsor.

Since he landed he has been pursued by reporters, cameramen, goggling curiosity seekers and more of the codfish aristocracy which affects one very much as a dead codfish in the moonlightstinking and shining, and shining and stinking. So-called society folk have ignored his wishes and bedevilled him to the extent that at the polo practice game between the British and American teams at Syosset, N. Y., he was compelled to arrive by the back way. And he put it over the social pushers. He went away up the field and sat on a camp stool along with the chauffeurs and the parked cars—and at least was not intruded upon then. The mob that sought to shove up next to him where he should have gone was much

Still, the alleged society folk who push themselves upon Mr. Windsor can hardly appreciate Burns. He wasn't rich, you know, and not being rich, is not to be considered at all and nothing he wrote is of any consequence, because he couldn't write checks, don't you know?-Birmingham News.

JUMPS TO DEATH IN MOVIE STUNT.

A determination to get into the movies, which many rounds of the studios failed to diminish, caused Cosmo Pocolli, 25, of Brooklyn, N. Y., to invite motion picture operators to picture him jumping off the Williamsburg Bridge into the East River, 175 feet below. The operators, on a tug, pictured the leap. (Continued from page one) and believing that the only way in which to build up this organization is to know from what source we could draw our strength, I heartily concur in the sentiments expressed by Major General David C. Shanks on this subject, and in order to bring this about and have an organization for defense I concur in the plans being prepared and disseminated by the Adjutant-General's Office of Alabama. This movement is not to be of a militaristic character, but is merely to represent the requirements of our National Defense policy. The defense test should inform the public of the plans and methods by which American armies will be raised in the event of a national emergency, and it is not intended to encourage war but to,

To The Candidates For Municipal Office

IN ALBANY, ALA.

Gentlemen:

We as the representatives of the several Churches of Albany beg leave to ask you to express yourselves on th following matters, which we deem of sufficient importance to our citizenship to justify the interest we are taking.

We are fully aware that it is impossible to legislate goo morals into the citizenship of our City, just as it is impos sible to enforce a law without public sentiment behind

We are not desirous of putting our organization int politics and in any partisan way, and for that reason hope that each and all of you may approve our stand on th several matters inquired about.

We ask your favorable consideration of the followin matters, and we pledge our organization and the Churche represented by them to back up the City officials in worl ing out a fair and reasonable set of ordinances and in th enforcement of same, in so far as we may be able to do se

We have tried to be reasonable and not radical and we d insist that as citizens of the City we are entitled to thes things.

1. We ask that Bawdy Houses, Houses of Prostitutio and Assignation Houses be prohibited and that every sible means available be resorted to make this a fact.

2. We ask that Bawdy Houses, Houses of Prostitution or receive prohibited liquors as it is to sell them, and the the punishment be the same.

3. We ask that public begging from house to house prohibited, unless a permit has been granted therefor ar it has been ascertained that the persons asking help a worthy.

4. We ask that such ordinances as will better protect t observance of the Christian Sabbath be adopted, especial do we request that the keeping open of places of business the Sabbath day be so regulated, as that every citizen of t Town may have the opportunity to attend the Church his choice at least one time on each Sunday.

5. We ask that a curfew or other similar law be passe such as will prohibit children of tender years from runnir about the streets unattended after sundown.

6. We ask that some sort of supervision of places amusement be provided, and enforced, to the end that of wives and children may be guaranteed decent and whol some amusement.

7. We ask that municipally controlled playgrounds established and maintained in the several wards of t city, to guarantee safe and suitable places where the ch dren may have plenty of happy and healthy out-of-door e joyment.

8. We ask that this Administration take some defini and decided action toward the beautification of City Pari and that this may be a continuing effort from year to ye so that there may be places of resort for our people whe safety and decency may go hand in hand.

9. We ask a vigorous enforcement of the law against violators alike, and that such punishment may be fixed will show the world that Albany means to protect her ci zens and particularly the women and children from inst and injury. Respectfully,

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Why Madge Felt Katherine Was too Optimistic About Mollie.

ing Ratte pleasted confecening

Molie Pawcett's stay at the farmhouse worked out most satisfactorily during the days that followed my arrival with the exquisitely beautiful girl whom Lillian, for some mysterious reason, wheled he to keep at my home until she should send for her.

Jim, evidently with memories of his wife's Jealous outburst strong upon him, was helicrossly careful in keeping far away from Mollie's vicinity, while my young guess tricity kept her volunteered paomist to avoid asking or accepting the alightest service from the husann of tempestuous Katie. Thus we were canabled to keep the dove of peace hovering over our menuse, although every time I looked at my little makin I expected to see is her face the signile which would send the bird surrying for shelter.

But, miraculously to me, they never appeared. She was not even suffer when waiting upon the table—I was careful that she was asked to do no other service for our guest—and after puzzling over the matter for a bit, I finally concluded that Jim had been she to convince her of his bellef in her superiority in the matter of eyes and features to my young guest.

The memory of the unpleasant incident lingered much longer with Mollie Fawcett, however. I knew that with the capacity for poignant a season only by the very young he stril wise suffering mental an expense of her bellef some laxity in her own behavior had caused the trouble. With the innated fignity which is so strongly a part of her, she refused the children's forter sagain to take her riding on "Lady", back, until I intervened her, that it was perfectly all right for her by original perfectly for her to enjoy the pastime she loved.

Her decision was received with hovous enthusiasm by Marion, Junior and Jefry Ticer. Indeed, the owner of "Lady" nominated himself a general bodyguard and factotum of Miss Fawcett, and followed her around like an affectionate puppy, much to the amusement of Ratherine and me.

Neither he nor the children had much of Mollie's society, however. True, she rode "Lady," two or three times such day, and also spent at least an hour of each twenty-four in telling Junior the stories for which he has an insatiable appetits. But the rest of her waking hours were spent in Dicky's studio.

Katherine's Opinion.

That Dicky's drawings had some hat Dicky's drawings had some attraction for her far greater than that explained by even an unusual interest in such work, was plainly to be seen. And I soon discovered that every scrap of information which she could pick up concerning Dicky and his methods of work was eagerly seized and filed away in her memory with miserly meticulousness. Gaby said, in a thoughtful tone.

She could play tennis and swim and she knew just exactly how to get rid of an awkward partner and what to say when she was introduced to the wrong kind of girl and wranted to got rid of her.

and wanted to get rid of her.

She Should Be Delighted

But of course the lettuce leaf settled the business.

Who would possibly dare to make a friend of a girl who ate the lettuce leaf at the bottom of the salad? How could she ever expect to amount to anything even if she were the brightest girl in the class and the kindest and the prettlest and the richest?

So, of course, little Freshie is very sad.

She really ought not to be sad at all.

She ought to be delighted.

She's had an escape and a parrow one

She's had an escape and a narrow one.

Who wants to get into a club made up of girls who judge each other by such things as this?

Why they're like the man who met Abraham Lincoln once and never stopped talking about the mole on Lincoln's nose.

He never mentioned another thing about the great President.

You see he was a skin specialist and he couldn't see anything—

All very well for a man in his line of business, but a bit tiresome in the long un, don't you think?

A Narrow, Little World

Lettuce—who cares whether you eat it or don't eat it? Big people never even know that such little fads come and go.

The great man eats what he wants when he wants it. And the woman of position and power goes without eating what-ever she doesn't want, no matter what the latest etiquette.

Little Mary Smith never makes up her mind about a new girl in class until she sees what kind of a car brings the new girl to school. If it is an expensive car the new girl is all right. If the car is cheap or old or ratily, or out of the fashion in any way, farewell to the new girl, as far as Mary Smith is concerned.

And the funny part of it is all the other girls judge poor Mary the same way and nobody cares a cent about her. They just like her father's car and the clothes her mother buys her and the hats her aunt chooses for her and poor silly little Mary just rattles around in the car and slumps around in the clothes and nobody would ever know it for larger than a work if a drawer flow down from the shipe. know it for longer than a week if a dragon flew down from the skies and carried her off in a flery chariot.

Poor little Mary and her friends, what a funny little narrow world they do live in, and what amusing little creatures they are.

If I found a girl of mine trying to be like them—oh, well, what's the use? A girl who is "like that" is like it and that's all there is to it; you can't do a thing about it and you might as well laugh and make the heat of it.

Some day the little Freshie will realize what a good thing it was for her that she ate the lettuce at the bottom of the salad.

If she hadn't happened to do that she might be learning this very minute exactly how to be a silly, empty-headed little snob.

YOUR HEALTH

When Baby Is Sick How Do You Care for Him?

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D. United States Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

OW do you treat a sick baby? The other day I drove past a fine home in the country and observed several children at play about the attractive grounds. My companion

"The parents of those nice kiddles never keep a sick child in bed if the youngster wants to get up and play."

That is startling, isn't it? We have been brought up to believe that everybody who is sick, certainly if fever is present, should be kept in bed.

Perhaps I am old-fashioned, for I hold to the popular idea that acutely sick persons should be kept quiet. I do think however, that the domestic use of the thermor is overdone. Just because the baby cries a bit or complains, is no reason for rushing after the thermometer. And yet, the presence of fever is a warning that something is wrong. If the temperature is high your doctor's advice is necessary. While waiting for him it is well to put the child in bed.

The bedroom should be quiet. Even little children are sensitive to noise and bright lights. If they are ill they require the same cool, quiet, shaded room that is so acceptable to a grown-up when he's sick.

Some children are nervous and easily upset. To avoid the disturbance due to excitement, it is well to exclude visitors, the other children of the family and the neighbors.

The bed should be made smooth and comfortable. The pillow ought to be shaken up now and then and turned over to give the hot cheek a fresh and cool resting place.

Above all else don't smother the child with heavy and hot bed clothing. Light covering will be sufficient—perhaps the sheet will be quite enough.

rom thirst you know what it means to go without water. It is torture to a child not to have it.

So, when your baby is ill. I beg of you to give him moderate quantiof you to give him moderate quanti-ties of water. Don't give it in a full glass and take it away after a sip. Use a little glass and have in it only the quantity of water the shild may take. Then he can have

The advice given here for your sick baby is also good advice for you to follow when you are sick.

So exclaimed Shakespeare's Puck to demonstrate his supernatural powers.

The first mortal to put a girdle around the earth was Ferdinand Magellan. On March 22, 1518, only sixteen years after the first voyage of Columbus, Magellan sailed from Seville with five vessels. Four and a half years later one ship returned minus the valiant leader, who had been killed in the Philippines. But as Magellan had previously voyaged as far east as the Moluccas, in the same latitude as the Philippines, he had actually been round the earth, though he did not live to complete the first continuous voyage.

"I'll push on if we have to eat the deather of the rigging," declared the dauntless navigator during the passage of the South Pacific. It must be remembered that Magellan voyaged in the same type of ship as Columbus. And while Columbus traveled about 3,000 miles in the Santa Maria, Magellan's fleet covered nearly 25,000 miles, since they had to round both South America and Africa.

Magellan was a Portuguese by birth, a member of the lesser nobility. During his early days he voyaged for the King of Portugal. In 1504 he had sailed round the Cape of Good Hope, discovered a few years previously by Portuguese savigators, in the service of the first Portuguese viceroy in the East Indies. There he was accused of trading with the Moors and, while the charges were not proved, he lost favor with the King of Pertugal, who refused him further employment. Magellan then emigrated to Spain and offered his allegiance to the King of Spain, who graciously accepted it.

Magellan proposed to the Spanish ruler to send him in search of the Indies by sailing around South America, whose dimensions were still only vaguely imagined.
